WHEELING, W. VA., JANUARY 1, 1886.

The New Year Outlook

The New Year opens more encouragingly than the old year did, for the old year has closed on batter conditions than did its predecessor of 1884. In the three years last past we have gave from a time of great prosperity to a time of great depression, but the settling was gradual, anticipated and therefore by the prudent discounted, and the panic time has passed without the panic coming upon us. The year 1885 has been better than 1884; the nd half of 1885 better than the first; and the closing months better than the beginning of the second half. So that the shadings are all favorable. Railroad construction for the year was there is marked improvement and goodly promise in iron and steel throughout. In fabrics the same improvement is noted, and eastern establishments are even encoursged to enlarge their producing ca-. There is good market for the glass of Wheeling and vicinity, and if we can steer clear of disspreaments between employers and workmen there ought to be a satisfactory year in this industry. There are vast quantities of raw products yet to bemarketed, wealth in store to be realized

The New Year brings encouragement not alone because buliness is on the up grade, but because confidence has been restored A better feeling pervades the country and the general expectation of better times will help on the tendency to im prove. In Wheeling and its vicinity where the nail industry plays so important a part, we are, by reason of the derangement of that industry, scarcely able to appreciate that outside there has been a healtny advance which is the prophecy of still better things to come.

There are no premonitory symptoms of a "boom," a condition of trade which invariably brings about reaction, disappointment, stagnation more or less prolonged, disaster. The indications point to better business, steadler employment, and in some branches better wages; for the farmer better prices; for the country fairly good times which will be all the better because they will not be times of feverish

Two Cabinet Officers.

Mr. Bayard and Mr. Vilas manage in one way and another to keep themselves well before the public. Now one seems to be ahead, and now another, and then in the distance they appear to be going neck-some effect bad treatment and give a quid pre que for good. Mr. Vilas got into the cabinet on a reputation for eloquence, but he has never learned the eloquence of gentlemanly deportment under all cir-

Mr. Bayard has amused himself and the country bombarding with ink the effete despotisms of the old world, with an occasional prose ode to his lamented grandfather, heaven rest his soul. Now the Secretary of State, if report does him no wrong, is giving the Speaker of the House to understand very plainly how he wants him to constitute the Committee on Foreign Affairs, who may be on it and who must not be chairman of it. What we desire to know is, whether this is the long promised "Jeffersonian simplicity"-s cabinet officer dictating to the Speaker of the House!

Speaking of relice, and that kind of thing, we are pleased to be informed by so esteemed a cotemporary as the Genoa Cittadino, that Signer Baldi, of that city, large scale, as it would be for heating uses, but there are economies to be se-tured in the method of burning it. Of the gas for illumination, fully one-uses, but there are economies to be secured in the method of burning it.

Of the gas for illumination, fully onehalf is lost because delivered at improper pressure at the point of ignition and by eakage between that point and the service meter. As to the loss at the point of ignition, that may be proved by placing a funnel shaped tube over the jet, which will collect the unconsumed gas, and it may be ignited at the small end of the tube, so that you have a flame at the jet and another at the end of the tube. As to the loss by leakage, it is too well known to need illustration.

The loss through improper pressure may be prevented whenever there is found a device, which, acting automatically, will regulate the pressure at the point of ignition, in accordance with the rise and fall caused by the varying increase and decrease of demand.

Such a device ought to be discoverable, and when it is discovered, reducing largely the amount of gas needed for present purponer, and the cost or manufacture is reduced by operating on a large scale, gas will not only go into dwellings, but into manufacturing establishments where it is not now.

A private letter just received here gives a thrilling narative of a mutiny, mention of which was recently cabled to the United States. The ship belorged to the British Mercantile Marine, and had for some time been doing duty as a Chinese transport in the Chinese seas. The writer of the letter is chief steward of the vessel, but as every effort has been the vessel, but as every enter in the made by the authorities in China to prevent the affair from becoming known, his name is suppressed. He says that the steamer was chattered by the Chinese for ten thousand deliars to carry from Amoy ten thousand deliars to carry from a more than the carry from the carry from a more than the carry from Raliroad construction for the year was greatly beyond expectation, and the promise for the New Year is infinitely better than that with which the past opened, than that with which the past opened, the rapid development of the natural gas interest has contributed its share to the renewed activity in the iron fadustry, and this development is now to be pushed with greater vigor than ever. If we except mails, the scason demand for which is over, there is marked improvement and goodly the ship way crowded to excess—bridge, be abandoned. When all were aboard the ship was crowded to excess—bridge, poop, forecastle, between decks and lower nolds being packed to suff-cation.

Fearably had the vessel gotten under way when the Black Flags, nearly all of whom were drunk, commanged to gamble, From gampling they got to quarrais, then to fights, and finally to murder and slaughter. The heathen fought each other like wild besste. Sumbers were thrown overboard slive, many more were stabled and wild beasts. Sumbers were thrown over-board alive, many more were stabled and strangeld, and then consigned to the waters. The crew looked on with terror, but not a man of them dared to interfere. All night long the butchery was kept up, and daylight saw over fifty dead bodies in different parts of the vossel. Mid-day came, and with it frightful heat. Below decks, where the Black Flags were hud-dled, the thermometer registered 180°, and in a single four forty of the wretches had dled, the thermometer registered 180°, and in a single nour forty of the wretches had been equeezed or smothered to death or had died from want of water. Finally, in desperation, a party of the Black Flogs seized the water on board and guarded it, refusing any to the crew. Another party tried to capture the supplies, and a learnit crush ensued, numbers being frampled to death. Unable to obtain the water, the score of the cooking apparatus overboard. store rooms, destriying all the food and throwing the cooking apparatus overboard. They eventually began to drink sea water. The sailors, who were learfully parghed, crawled down to the engine room and endeavored to appease their sufferings with hot, condensed water.

Towards evening the aspect of affairs became still more serious, the multineers threatening to kill the crew, and drawing knives across their own throats to indicate to the sailors their intentions. The captain was seized and held by the beard while a knife was held to his throat. Eventually the vessel was put back to Amoy, where a British war ship was anchored. The commander of the latter prepared to sweep the vessel deak with his chored. The commander of the latter pre-pared to sweep the vessel deck with his datlings, and before doing so biarded her. The mutineers, who were then standing on the deck with blauk flags hoisted on spears, decided to surrender. At this time less that 2,600 out of the 2,500 that origi-nally went on board the vessel were alive. Subsequently two Chinese granboats arand-neck. If it is the presidential nomination they are after they will both get it at the same time.

Mr. Vilas' trouble is that he is puffed up with his place; uncivil, ill-tempered, very nearly a boor. He is a great respecter of persons, as such people are likely to be, discriminating in favor of men who are in position to resent with some effect bad treatment and give a

It appears that Signor Baldi came to America twenty years ago, obtained the chains and salled away again with his trophy in his trunk. In all the succeeding years he has hugged his secret to his heart, but now that Chicago is talking about a big international exhibition to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the Columbus find, Signor Baldi rattles his chains.

There is no suggestion as yet about ashing Congress to buy the talented Signor's fittenth century hardware; that will come in time. Until then, we might get along with a photograph of the chains.
